PREFACE.

The importance of securing uniformity in geographic nomenclature in all portions of the territory of the United States at the earliest practicable date being constantly felt in this office, Prof. W. D. Alexander, Assistant United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, was instructed to compile the following list and glossary for the Territory of Hawaii. The brief biographical sketch of Professor Alexander is inserted to show his peculiar fitness for this task, and it is believed that he is the most reliable living authority on the subject.

He was born at Honolulu, Hawaii, April 2, 1833, soon after the arrival of his family in the islands, his father, Rev. W. P. Alexander, having gone to the islands in 1832 as a missionary.

He was educated in the mission school at Punahou, near Honolulu, and at Harrisburg, Pa., and graduated at Yale College as salutatorian in 1855 with the degree of A. M. He was a tutor at Beloit College, Wisconsin, in 1856, and a teacher in an academy at Vincennes, Ind., in 1857.

He returned to the islands in 1858 and held various positions of trust and importance, as follows: Professor of Greek, Oahu College; president Oahu College, 1864-1871; surveyor-general Hawaiian Islands, 1872-1901; member of privy council, 1884; member of board of education, 1887-1900; commissioner to International Meridian Conference at Washington, D. C., 1884; Fellow Royal Geographic Society, 1892; commissioner from the Provisional Government to the United States, 1893; member of Astronomical Society of the Pacific; Assistant United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, February 1, 1901.

He is the author of the following publications: A Brief History of the Hawaiian People; History of the Later Years of the Hawaiian Monarchy and of the Revolution; Brief Hawaiian Grammar; Introduction to L. Andrews' Hawaiian Dictionary; Ancient Systems of Land Tenure in Polynesia; Relations between Hawaii and Spanish America; Proceedings of the Russians on Kauai; The Uncompleted Treaty of Annexation, 1854.

His intimate acquaintance with the subject as surveyor-general of the islands for a term of twenty-nine years and his lifelong familiarity with the language make him a recognized authority, and the Survey is fortunate in being able to publish this contribution from his pen.

HAWAIIAN GEOGRAPHIC NAMES.

THE PRONUNCIATION OF HAWAIIAN WORDS.

The consonants in general are sounded as in English. No distinction was formerly made between the sounds of K and T, or between those of L and R. The sound of the letter W generally approximates to that of V between two vowels. A is sounded as in father, E as in they, I as in marine, O as in note, U as oo in moon. Ai when sounded as a diphthong resembles the English ay or the Italian ai, and au the English ou as in loud.

Besides the sounds mentioned above, there is in many words a slight guttural break between two vowels, where the Polynesian K has been dropped, as in i'a for ika, a fish.

Every word and every syllable must end in a vowel, and no two consonants ever occur without a vowel sound between them. The accent of about five-sixths of the words in the language is on the penult. A few of the proper names are accented on the final syllable, as Puako', Mana', etc.

MEANING OF HAWAIIAN GEOGRAPHIC NAMES.

It is very difficult, if not impossible, to translate most of these names, on account of their great antiquity and the changes which many of them have evidently undergone. It often happens that a word may be translated in different ways by dividing it differently. Many names of places in these islands are common to other groups of islands in the South Pacific, and were probably brought here by the earliest colonists. They have been used for centuries without any thought of their original meaning.

Sometimes they embody names of persons of whom no tradition remains, e. g., Kā-wai-a-Hao, "the water of Hao;" Kā-puu-o-Uo, "the hill of Uo," etc.

Many names, however, are evidently descriptive, as Mauna Loa, "long mountain;" Mauna Kēa, "the white mountain"—Mont Blanc; Puu Ulaula, "red hill;" Kā-puna-hou, "the new spring;" Kā-lae-loa, the "long cape;" Kē-ala-i-Kāhiki, "the way to Tahiti," the west point of Kahoolawe, etc.

The compounds of Wai, "water," are numerous, as Wai-awa, bitter water; Wai-manalo, brackish water; Wai-aleale, rippling water; Wai-oli, singing water; Wai-akea, open water; Wai-lua, two waters, etc.

Compounds of Hono, an obsolete word for harbor, are also numerous, as Hono-lulu, quiet harbor or Fair Haven; Hono-malino, calm harbor; Hono-manu, bird harbor; Hono-uliuli, blue harbor, etc.

In the vicinity of Honolulu the name Nuu-anu is compounded of nuu, a step or terrace, and anu, cool. Puowaina, Punchbowl Hill, is said by native pundits to be a contraction of puu-o-waiho-ana, "the hill of sacrifice." Manoa is the "broad" valley;

Palolo, the "clay" valley; Ka-imu-ki, "the oven for ti root," where the saccharine root of the Cordyline terminalis was cooked for food. Ka-lihi means the "outside edge," or boundary valley. Ka-moo-iliili is "the pebbly strip."

Hale-a-ka-la is generally translated "House of the Sun," but according to the ancient legend it is the place where the sun was ensnared by the demigod Maui, and the form of the same name applied to a mountain in Waianae, Oahu, is Hele-a-ka-la, "the trap of the sun." Hale-lea, a district on Kauai, is "house of joy." Ka-lihi-kai means "edge of the sea," and Kai-lua, "two seas." Ka-u, a district on Hawaii, is "the female breast," and Ke-ala-ke-kua, "the way of the gods," who haunted the precipices that overhang that bay. Ka-wela is "the hot" (place).

The following is a glossary of the words most frequently occurring in Hawaiian geographic names:
